

Fig. S2. The process finding the mid-axillary line. (A) The most peripherally located pleura at the level of xiphoid process on the horizontal plane (arrow). Mid-axillary line (a) is defined as the left-right scout line passing through this point. The antero-posterior scout line is passing through this point (b). (B) Mid-axillary line at the right end of the torso on the sagittal view (arrows) found by using the crosslink from the horizontal plane. Antero-posterior scout line and cranio-caudal scout line is also marked (dotted lines).